

Copy in Files Section

October 16, 1943

Thompson McAusland talked to Mr. Gardner - said he didn't think it was positive that under the British pledged system a country would get back its own gold contribution - also uncertain as to whether a country is obliged to provide currency in exchange for its own gold contribution - also said that the notice when a country had used two-thirds of its quota was really intended to be instant notice.