

I. General Approach to Problems of International Law.

- a. Nature & sources of international law
 - b. Applicability of existing rules to new or unusual conditions.
 - c. Principles to be applied in the absence of a formulated rule of international law.
- I. Conclusion

II. Authority of the United Nations to Carry Out Their Legitimate War Aims.

- a. International law permits nations which have won a war, such as that being waged by the United Nations against Germany, to accomplish the ends for which they have struggled by imposing upon their defeated enemy, in an armistice or a treaty of peace, such terms & punishments as they consider necessary; and if the defeated nation lacks a government capable of accepting an armistice or a treaty of peace, the victors may carry out the terms & punishments through a military government.
- b. Germany has forfeited all belligerent rights under international law except the right to humane treatment, & since the United Nations include nearly all of the civilized nations of the world, the extent as to the humanness of treatment to be accorded Germany is public opinion & views of government authorities in the United Nations.

I General Approach to Problems of International Law.

- (a) Nature & sources of international law
- (b) Applicability of existing rules to new or unusual conditions.
- (c) Principles to be applied in the absence of a formulated rule of international law.

I Conclusion.

II Authority of the United Nations to Carry Out Their Legitimate War Aims.

- (a) International law permits nations which have won a war, such as that being waged by the United Nations against Germany, to accomplish the ends for which they have struggled by imposing upon their defeated enemy, in an armistice or a treaty of peace, such terms & punishments as they consider necessary; and if the defeated nation lacks a government capable of accepting an armistice or a treaty of peace, the victors may carry out the terms & punishments through a military government.
- (b) Germany has forfeited all belligerent rights under international law except the right to humane treatment, & since the United Nations include nearly all of the civilized nations of the world, the best test as to the humaneness of treatment to be accorded Germany is public opinion & views of government authorities in the United Nations.