

Bretton Woods Cited
As Vital to Peace

Asserting that "politics and economics are inseparable," Senator Kilgore (Dem., W. Va.) told a meeting at the Palmer House last night that adoption of the Bretton Woods monetary proposals is an integral part of the framework of international peace.

"For the first time in history," Kilgore said, "we have laid out before us the way to international monetary co-operation in place of international monetary anarchy and economic warfare."
