<sup>2/</sup> Two Article IV consultations were discussed by the Board within a single calendar year for two countries in 1983, one country in 1984, three countries in 1985, and one country in 1986 and in 1989. Also, separate consultation discussions were concluded with the Netherlands and the Netherlands Antilles in 1983, 1985, 1986, and 1987; and with Aruba in 1986 and 1988. The number of members covered was thus 117 in 1983, 118 in 1984, 127 in 1985, 122 in 1986, 114 in 1987, 109 in 1988, and 98 in 1989.

<sup>4/</sup> Staff reports issued but not necessarily discussed during indicated year. In 1987, includes three staff reports for interim consultation discussions under the bicyclic procedure (with Kiribati, Oman, and Seychelles). In 1988 includes 11 staff reports for interim consultation discussions (Austria, Bhutan, Cape Verde, Cyprus, Fiji, Ireland, Israel, Maldives, Mauritius, Papua New Guinea, and Tonga). In 1989, includes 15 staff reports for interim consultation discussions (Barbados, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, Iceland, Kuwait, Lao, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Portugal, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Western Samoa, and Yemen, P.D.R.). The staff report for the interim consultation discussions with Iceland was discussed by the Board in February 1989.

1/ Excludes supplemental consultations and midyear consultations under enhanced surveillance. A complete listing of countries concluding Article IV consultations in 1988 and 1989 is provided in Tables 20 and 21.

2/ Countries with stand-by, SAF, ESAF or extended arrangements in effect as of December 31, 1989.

3/ Countries for which the timing specified for the next consultation (excluding grace period) fell during the calendar year indicated. No data is shown for the 1980-83 period as the procedure of specifying individual consultation intervals, introduced at the time of the 1983 review of surveillance, began to be in place only in the course of 1984. See Tables 6 and 7 for 1988-89 details.

4/ An interim Article IV report was issued for the Lao People's Democratic Republic in 1989.

5/ Includes countries under the bicyclic procedure with whom interim consultation discussions were held and the related reports issued, as follows: 3 in 1987, 11 in 1988, and 14 in 1989. As indicated in footnote 4 of Table 1, a total of 15 staff reports for the interim consultation discussions were issued in 1989, but that for Iceland was discussed by the Board and the consultation concluded in February 1989.

1/ On 12-month cycle, but a lack of cooperation with the authorities in the past did not permit the scheduling of a mission in 1988-89; a staff technical visit took place in February-March 1990 to prepare the ground for an Article IV mission that could take place following the elections scheduled for May 1990.

2/ On a 12-month cycle, but security conditions for a mission cannot be assured; a scheduling of the Article IV consultation with Afghanistan is being discussed.

3/ "Security problems" refer to cases where the member, in a situation of armed conflict, has declined to receive a consultation mission, or where the security of the mission cannot be assured. In the case of Iraq, Article IV consultation discussions were held in 1983; the staff report and the report on recent economic developments were issued in August 1983 but were not discussed by the Executive Board. In the case of the Islamic Republic of Iran, a consultation mission visited Teheran in February 1990.

1/ Recorded in year in which consultation concluded.

2/ The terms "initial" and "final" discussions are used to refer to cases where the conclusion of consultation discussions with the authorities requires multiple missions or further discussions with the authorities at headquarters, generally associated with concurrent discussions of use of Fund resources. In the more usual cases of single missions, "initial" and "final" discussions are the same.

3/ The Executive Board agreed to waive the circulation period in these cases.

1/ Individual countries may have had more than one request for extension in a given year. Excludes two requests for extension of the midyear Article IV consultation with Venezuela under enhanced surveillance procedures, on 5/30/85 and 2/18/87.

2/ Mostly on account of heavy Executive Board schedules, often around the time of the Interim Committee and Annual Meetings, but also including cases where the Executive Director elected by the member concerned was unable to be present. Prior to 1984, many extension requests took place because the three-month period expired during a period when the Executive Board normally would not meet; however, since June 1983, such delays no longer require a request for extension.

3/ During 1987, includes a request for delay in the case of Uruguay in order to hold the Article IV consultation jointly with the discussion of the request for enhanced surveillance.
